Blue Grey Slate

The Samaca Q33 Slate is a “La Hebra” type slate. The quarry is in Carballeda de Valdeorras in the La Bana region in North West Spain. This is highly regarded as One of the finest slate deposits in all of Spain. At more than 1,500 meters above sea level, the meticulousness of its extraction is matched only by the quality of the slate bed exploited.

The Samaca Q33 slate is a dark blue grey to black slate, with a regular vertical grain, a smooth and consistent texture, and occasional small non-oxidizing metallic minerals scattered on the surface of the slate.

It's deep color is stable over time, and harmoniously reflects the variations in nature making it a popular choice for roofs new and old. It's physical and aesthetic qualities make it sought after both in restoration, new construction and specialist projects adapted to regional traditions. Recognised for more than 40 years, Samaca Q33 is included in the historical range of Samaca slates, obtaining official approval from the Snowdonia National Park Authorities to be used as a Welsh Dark Blue Grey alternative.
